Weekly Reflection: 4th Sunday of Easter – April 22, 2018

"I am the Good Shepherd. I know My sheep and My sheep know Me."

Who would not know the beautiful Psalm 23 – "The Lord is my Shepherd, there is nothing I shall want." But more than knowing the psalm the more important question is: Do we know the Shepherd of the Psalm? Have we encountered the Good Shepherd of the Psalm?

This Sunday we celebrate the Good Shepherd Sunday. And the Gospel speaks to us of Jesus being the Good Shepherd, and we, who believe in Him, being His sheep. Sounds very cozy and nice. But while it is great to have a wonderful shepherd, are we ready to see ourselves as sheep? This is quite humbling because a sheep is not exactly the smartest of the animals. They are very vulnerable, they easily get lost and need protection and guidance. They also need to stay in flocks. But is this not really an accurate image of our human condition. Hence, we can only but be filled with admiration for the passion and dedication of the Shepherd in taking care of us His sheep.

Today, we are being invited to pray also for those that share and will share in the mission of Jesus in shepherding His flock. May they have the compassion and dedication of the Good Shepherd in their hearts.

The Balancing Act of Raising Teenagers

If you're a parent or caregiver of teenagers, you know that it's a whole new ballgame when it comes to child-rearing. Developmentally ready for more independence, but facing major challenges from relationships, friendships and hormones, guiding a teen through these years can be tricky.

Many parents would tell you these years seem like a balancing act. Here's just a few tips from experienced caregivers:

- Give them space but remain available: Teens want to assert their independence, but also have a need to talk things out. Finding times where you are sharing time together (like over a late-night snack or breakfast) without pressuring them to share, can result in more confidence and a closer relationship.
- Give advice when necessary but listen first. We all know teens often balk when given a lot of direct advice. But if you truly listen and empathize first, you can act as a sounding board to help them sort through various problems.
- Encourage independence, while prioritizing connection. It can be hard to remember, but ultimately we all want teens to learn to become responsible adults who can think for themselves. That means they'll have to have to start figuring out how to strike out on their own. At the same time, show them you value the time you spend together-whether it's time together at Mass, shopping for a fall wardrobe or pursuing a favorite family hobby.
- Don't take all outbursts personally, but still work to repair the relationship. Teens can say some of the most hurtful things-we may have done the same when we were young! Oftentimes it has less to do with you, and more to do with whatever they're going through. At the same time, take the chance to tell them that you love them. Whether they are angry with you or not, you are the stable pillars in their life and they need your love and attention.

○ Above all, pray for your kids! Entrust them to the Blessed Mother-after all, even Jesus was a teenager once!

Updates from the Building & Maintenance Committee

Three Building & Maintenance Committee members and Ken Waltjen, cleared the old conduits in the outside globe lights fronting the church so these lights can eventually be turned on after the outside of the church is painted. Inside the church, the committee is looking to improve ventilation by replacing several fans and maximizing air flow through stained glass windows without overextending these windows. There will be Saturday workgroups to replace bumpers on the kneelers, fix broken pews & align pews by painting spots on church floor.

- Submitted by Mary Correa

The Monthly Second Collection for Building Repair & Maintenance will be used for this project amongst other repairs to the church & rectory buildings. Mahalo for your donations!
