25th Sunday in Ordinary Time – 2022

Have we been trustworthy in small matters?

While there is a gnawing desire in man to acquire and possess everything that the world is offering, this Sunday's gospel reminds us that we are instead called to be stewards of God's creation. But we easily forget that all these belong to God and that is when greed and desire to hoard comes in.

As stewards we are accountable to God on how we use and take care of all these that have been entrusted including our life and talents. Coming from God, all of these are blessings that must be cultivated not only for one's personal advancement but for the good of humanity. So we better put them into good use for "The person who is trustworthy in very small matters is also trustworthy in great ones..."

In the parable, the Lord also reminds us that we are so good and adept when it comes to taking care of earthly affairs. But should we not give more thought on taking care of our relationship with God? As stewards of the Lord, we must remember "No servant can serve two masters. One cannot serve both God and mammon."
